Woodbury & Co. Collection

MS 08

Business Records

ABSTRACT

This collection contains company records and products made by Woodbury and Company of Worcester, Massachusetts, which produced fine letterhead stationery from the early 20th century to the early 21st Century. Woodbury focused particularly on "bird's eye views" of factories, and the collection includes many prints and 60 original detailed drawings.

BACKGROUND

Based in Worcester, Massachusetts, Woodbury and Co. was established in the early 1880s by John C. Woodbury, a member of the WPI class of 1876. In the early years, Woodbury was in partnerships, with the original company being Kyes and Woodbury, and then Woodbury-Carlton Company. Woodbury and Co. was well-known as a leader in industrial graphic logos. The company became particularly renowned for its "birds eye view" engravings of factories and commercial buildings that appeared in advertising and stationery throughout the country. The innovative use of a photogravure engraving process had much to do with the company's success. The company produced many collectible engravings such as first day covers and presidential portraits. Four generations of the Woodbury family owned and operated the company until its closure in 2001.

For information about the history of Woodbury and Co. consult The Woodbury and Company Story by Harold D. Woodbury edited by Kimball Woodbury, and The History of Woodbury and Company by Harold D. Woodbury, edited by Ljungquist, Hanlan and Obien (2007); WPI Project Report: Family Matters - An examination of Woodbury and Co. and its contribution to the printing industry, by Varney, Ljungquist, and Hanlan; "John C. Woodbury," History of Worcester and its People, by Charles Nutt, volume II (Lewis Historical Publishing Company: New York, 1919); and "Triumph of the Tactile: Woodbury and Co. Inc., Worcester," by Susan Mellen, Worcester Business Journal (December 21, 1998)

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The materials consist primarily of printing samples, wood block and photogravure engraving proofs, and sky camera photographs. Also included are company records, photographs, scrapbooks, newsletters, memorabilia, and miscellaneous company artifacts. Most notable is a set of large bird-eyes hand-drawn renderings of factories and commercial buildings. The collection dates roughly from 1882 to 2001, with additional notes by Kimball Woodbury through 2009.

Series 1 contains Woodbury and Company history, including correspondence, company records, recollections of employees, paper memorabilia, and many photographs of employees at work and at company-related social activities.

It also contains a complete set of company newsletters, from 1951-2001. The company records are extensive, and this series includes the manuscript of Harold Woodbury's History of Woodbury and Company.

Series 2 is comprised of prints of wood engravings, photogravure and sky camera photographs, and industrial plant drawings. The wood engravings are at the beginning of boxes in which they are found; generally organization is by size and alphabetically by company name. In some of the larger boxes other materials are also present because of size considerations. Most of these prints are undated, but many, perhaps most, were made between about 1915 and the 1950s.

Series 3 is made up of the 60 original drawings and two photogravures which are part of the collection. Most of these are very large and are stored separately from the other materials. They have received conservation evaluation and treatment.

Series 4 includes letterhead samples, and other products which Woodbury and Company produced besides industrial plant drawings and photographs. There are art prints, first day stamps, portraits, and decal samples in this series.

Series 5 includes engraving plates, two cameras, a roller, and a watercolor painting done by Albert Nelson, long-time director of the art department at Woodbury and Company.

The series are not always entirely separate, since larger materials are organized by size as well as by type.

Framed watercolor painting			Painting by Albert W. Nelson, Woodbury & Company's Art Director, [13"X14½" framed] Note with painting says: "View from rear window of the Art Department in the original second story section of the plant, showing Marshall Pond and hill with houses beyond. In the distance is the factory of Rockwood Sprinkler Co. and Green Hill Park with the old Green Mansion. At the left is the Boston and Maine "Round-House" for turning steam locomotives around and repair and maintenance buildings. The Bay State Automobile building which later became the Bell Co. and then Thom McAnn had not been built.

This was painted, but unfinished, by Albert W. Nelson, our Art Director for many years, between 1925 and 1965. Mr. Nelson contributed this picture to our collection in 1988, at the age of 97."
