1841

Master Humphrey's Clock: Barnaby Rudge: Part 52

Charles Dickens

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.wpi.edu/barnabyrudge

Recommended Citation
Dickens, Charles, "Master Humphrey's Clock: Barnaby Rudge: Part 52" (1841). Barnaby Rudge. 7.
https://digitalcommons.wpi.edu/barnabyrudge/7

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Novels at Digital WPI. It has been accepted for inclusion in Barnaby Rudge by an authorized administrator of Digital WPI. For more information, please contact digitalwpi@wpi.edu.
MASTER
HUMPHREY'S
CLOCKS
BY "BOZ,"
SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1841.
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY G. CATHERMOLLE & H. K. BROWNE.
BARNABY RUDGE.

PUNCH AND EVANS,
PRINTERS, WHITEHALL.

LONDON: CHAPMAN AND HALL, 186, STRAND;
FIRST SERIES, MARCH 27, 1841.

Printed by T. McLean, Esq.; Published by T. McLean, Esq., 54, Soho Square, London, W.
MASTEl HUMPHREY'S CLOCl\.

Early in April will be published, handomely bound in cloth, with edges marbled, price 8s.,

THE SECOND VOLUME OF

MASTER HUMPHREY'S CLOCl\,

CONTAINING THE CONCLUSION OF

THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

EMBELLISHED WITH A FRONTISPICE AND UPWARDS OF SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS.

BY GEORGE CATTERMOLE AND HABLOT BROWNE.

The publishers are respectfully reminded that the first two volumes of this work, now completed, contain, among other matter, the whole of the "Old Curiosity Shop," which alone is equal in quantity to three octavo volumes of the usual size.

A Volume of this Work will be completed and published every Six Months.

The TRADE are informed that cloth cases for binding Subscribers' Copies may be had after the 15th instant.

LONDON: CHAPMAN AND HALL, 186, STRAND. Orders received by all Booksellers.

DOMESTIC DEVOTION.

In one thick volume, deep two, price 1s. 6d. extra.

THE FAMILY SACRAMENT. A FORM of Domestic Devotion for every Sabbath in the Year.

"It is a complete book of Family worship."—After. "An ex­cellent volume of family devotion."—Watchman. Well calculated for reading to the household church."—Gazette. "This work is admirably suited for domestic devotion."—Church of England Quarterly Review.

NEW SACRED SONGS.

UNDER the title of "THE SACRED LYRICIST, in Eastern Offering," Jefferys and Nelson have published a set of Sixteen Sacred Songs, Duets, and Trios, by the most popular composers, set forth in choral embroidery by John B年级KH, elegantly bound, and the price only 13s. 6d., net square, London.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

M. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has his new discovery an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures, and STRICTLY MODERATE CHARGES. They perfectly resemble the natural teeth as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change color or decay, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and are guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and in order that Mr. Howard's improvement may be within reach of the most economical, he has reduced his charges to the lowest scale possible. Toothache instantly cured, and decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.—31, Fleet-street.

MastcR HUMPHREY'S PEN,

Warranted to go well, and work regular.

THIE SHAKSPERE PEN,

Fitted for all bands, and suited to all purposes.

"From what we heard of these Pens, we were induced to try them, though not without some doubts. The trial was made, and in justice to the maker we must say, they need only be known to be in very extensive use."—The Observer.

O N E V E R Y S P O R T S M A N S' AND E P I C U R E S' T A B L E.

THORN'S TALLY-HO! SAUCE.

For Fish, Game, Steaks, Chops, and General purposes, as Soup, Gravy, &c., stews suitable for vast and economy, in Bottles, 5s. and 10s. each.

THORN'S POTTED YARMOUTH BLOATERS.

For Toast, Biscuits, sandwiches, and as a sale relish for Wine, are allowed by the first Epicures to be the greatest luxury ever prepared. In Pots 1s. and 2s. each. Warehouse, 289, High Holborn; and of all Sauce-vendors.

"BEWARE OF IMPOSTORS."
PREFACE.

"An author," says Fielding, in his introduction to 'Tom Jones,' ought to consider himself, not as a gentleman who gives a private or eleemosynary treat, but rather as one who keeps a public ordinary, at which all persons are welcome for their money. Men who pay for what they eat, will insist on gratifying their palates, however nice and whimsical these may prove; and if everything is not agreeable to their taste, will challenge a right to censure, to abuse, and to damn their dinner without control.

"To prevent, therefore, giving offence to their customers by any such disappointment, it hath been usual with the honest and well-meaning host to provide a bill of fare, which all persons may peruse at their first entrance into the house; and having thence acquainted themselves with the entertainment which they may expect, may either stay and regale with what is provided for them, or may depart to some other ordinary better accommodated to their taste."

In the present instance, the host or author, in opening his new establishment, provided no bill of fare. Sensible of the difficulties of such an undertaking in its infancy, he preferred that it should make its own way, silently and gradually, or make no way at all. It has made its way, and is doing such a thriving business that nothing remains for him but to add, in the words of the good old civic ceremony, now that one dish has been discussed and finished, and another smokes upon the board, that he drinks to his guests in a loving cup, and bids them hearty welcome.

DEVONSHIRE TERRACE, LONDON,
March, 1841.
CHAPTER THE TWELFTH.

There was a brief pause in the state-room of the Maypole, as Mr. Haredale tried the lock to satisfy himself that he had shut the door securely, and, striding up the dark chamber to where the screen inclosed a little patch of light and warmth, presented himself, abruptly and in silence, before the smiling guest.

If the two had no greater sympathy in their inward thoughts than in their outward bearing and appearance, the meeting did not seem likely to prove a very calm or pleasant one. With no great disparity between them in point of years, they were, in every other respect, as unlike and far removed from each other as two men could well be. The one was soft-spoken, delicately made, precise, and elegant; the other, a burly square-built man, negligently dressed, rough and abrupt in manner, stern, and, in his present mood, forbidding both in look and speech. The one preserved a calm and placid smile; the other, a distrustful frown. The new-comer, indeed, appeared bent on showing by his every tone and gesture his determined opposition and hostility to the man he had come to meet. The guest who received him, on the other hand, seemed to feel that the contrast between them was all in his favour, and to derive a quiet exultation from it which put him more at his ease than ever.

"Haredale," said this gentleman, without the least appearance of embarrassment or reserve, "I am very glad to see you."

"Let us dispense with compliments. They are misplaced between us," returned the other, waving his hand, "and say plainly what we have to say. You have asked me to meet you. I am here. Why do we stand face to face again?"

"Still the same frank and sturdy character I see!"

"Good or bad, sir, I am," returned the other, leaning his arm upon the chimney-piece, and turning a haughty look upon the occupant of the easy-chair, "the man I used to be. I have lost no old likings or dislikes; my memory has not failed me by a hair's-breadth. You ask me to give you a meeting. I say, I am here."

"Our meeting, Haredale," said Mr. Chester, tapping his snuff-box, "is one of conference and peace, I hope!"

"I have come here," returned the other, "at your desire, holding myself bound to meet you, when and where you would. I have not come to bandy pleasant speeches, or hollow professions. You are a smooth man of the world, sir, and at such play have me at a disadvantage. The very last man on this earth with whom I would enter the lists to combat with gentle compliments and masked faces, is Mr. Chester, I do assure you. I am not his match at such weapons, and have reason to believe that few men are."

"You do me a great deal of honour, Haredale," returned the other, most composedly, "and I thank you. I will be frank with you—"

"I beg your pardon—will be what?"

D D
"Frank—open—perfectly candid."

"Hah!" cried Mr. Haredale, drawing in his breath with a sarcastic smile.

"But don't let me interrupt you."

"So resolved am I to hold this course," returned the other, tasting his wine with great deliberation, "that I have determined not to quarrel with you, and not to be betrayed into a warm expression or a hasty word."

"There again," said Mr. Haredale, "you will have me at a great advantage. Your self-command—"

"Is not to be disturbed, when it will serve my purpose, you would say"—rejoined the other, interrupting him with the same complacency. "Granted. I allow it. And I have a purpose to serve now. So have you. I am sure our object is the same. Let us attain it like sensible men, who have ceased to be boys some time.—Do you drink?"

"With my friends," returned the other.

"At least," said Mr. Chester, "you will be seated!"

"I will stand," returned Mr. Haredale impatiently, "on this dismantled, beggar'd hearth, and not pollute it, fallen as it is, with mockeries. Go on!"

"You are wrong, Haredale" said the other, crossing his legs, and smiling as he held his glass up in the bright glow of the fire. "You are really very wrong. The world is a lively place enough, in which we must accommodate ourselves to circumstances, sail with the stream as glibly as we can, be content to take froth for substance, the surface for the depth, the counterfeit for the real coin. I wonder no philosopher has ever established that our globe itself is hollow. It should be, if Nature is consistent in her works."

"You think it is, perhaps?"

"I should say," he returned, sipping his wine, "there could be no doubt about it. Well; we, in our trifling with this jingling toy, have had the ill luck to jostle and fall out. We are not what the world calls friends; but we are as good and true and loving friends for all that, as nine out of every ten of those on whom it bestows the title. You have a niece, and I a son—a fine lad, Haredale, but foolish. They fall in love with each other, and form what this same world calls an attachment; meaning a something fanciful and false like all the rest, which, if it took its own free time, would break like any other bubble. But it may not have its own free time—will not, if they are left alone—and the question is, shall we two, because society calls us enemies, stand aloof, and let them rush into each other's arms, when, by approaching each other sensibly, as we do now, we can prevent it, and part them?"

"I love my niece," said Mr. Haredale, after a short silence. "It may sound strangely in your ears; but I love her."

"Strangely, my good fellow!" cried Mr. Chester, lazily filling his glass again, and pulling out his toothpick. "Not at all. I like Ned too—or, as you say, love him—that's the word among such near relations. I'm very fond of Ned. He's an amazingly good fellow, and a handsome fellow—foolish and weak as yet; that's all. But the thing is, Haredale—for I'll be very frank, as I told you I would at first—indepently of any dislike that you and I might have to being related to each other, and independently of the religious differences between us—and damn it, that's important—I couldn't afford a match of this description. Ned and I couldn't do it. It's impossible.

"Curb your tongue, in God's name, if this conversation is to last," retorted Mr. Haredale fiercely. "I have said I love my niece. Do you think, loving her, I would have her fling her heart away on any man who had your blood in his veins?"

"You see," said the other, not at all disturbed, "the advantage of being so frank and open. Just what I was about to add, upon my honour! I am amazingly attached to Ned—quite do:it upon him, indeed—and even if we could afford to throw ourselvcs away, that very objection would be quite insuperable.—I wish you'd take some wine."

"Mark me," said Mr. Haredale, striding to the table, and laying his hand upon it heavily. "If any man believes—presumes to think—that I, in word, or deed, or in the wildest dream, ever entertained remotely the idea of Emma Haredale's favouring the suit of one who was akin to you—in any way—I care not what—he lies. He lies, and does me grievous wrong, in the mere thought."

"Haredale," returned the other, rocking himself to and fro as in assent, and nodding at the fire, "it's extremely manly, and really very generous in you, to meet me in this unreserved and handsome way. Upon my word, those are exactly my sentiments, only expressed with much more force and power than I could use—you know my sluggish nature, and will forgive me, I am sure."

"While I would restrain her from all correspondence with your son, and sever their intercourse here, though it should cause her death," said Mr. Haredale, who had been pacing to and fro, "I would do it kindly and tenderly if I can. I have a trust to discharge which my nature is not formed to understand, and, for this reason, the bare fact of there being any love between them comes upon me to-night, almost for the first time."

"I am more delighted than I can possibly tell you," rejoined Mr. Chester, with the utmost blandness, "to find my own impression so confirmed. You see the advantage of our having met. We understand each other. We quite agree. We have a most complete and thorough explanation, and we know what course to take,—Why don't you taste your tenant's wine? It's really very good."

"Pray who," said Mr. Haredale, "have aided Emma, or your son? Who are their go-betweens, and agents—do you know?"

"All the good people hereabouts—the neighbourhood in general, I think," returned the other, with his most affable smile. "The messenger I sent to you to-day, foremost among them all."

"The idiot! Barnaby?"

"You are surprised! I am glad of that, for I was rather so myself. Yes. I wrung that from his mother—a very decent sort of woman—from whom, indeed, I chiefly learnt how serious the matter had become, and so determined to ride out here to-day, and hold a parley with you on this neutral ground.—You're stouter than you used to be, Haredale, but you look extremely well."

"Our business, I presume, is nearly at an end," said Mr. Haredale, with an expression of impatience he was at no pains to conceal. "Trust me, Mr. Chester, my niece shall change from this time. I will appeal," he added in a lower tone, "to her woman's heart, her dignity, her pride, her duty."—

"I shall do the same by Ned," said Mr. Chester, restoring some errant faggots to their place in the grate with the toe of his boot. "If there is anything real in the world, it is those amazingly fine feelings and those natural obligations which must subsist between father and son. I shall put it to him on every ground of moral and religious feeling. I shall represent to him that we cannot possibly afford it—that I have always looked forward to his marrying well, for a genteel provision for myself in the autumn of life—that there are a great many amorous dogs to pay, whose claims are perfectly just and right, and who must be paid out of his wife's fortune. In short, that the very highest and most honourable feelings of our nature, with every consideration of filial duty and affection, and all that sort of thing, imperatively demand that he should run away with an heiress."

"And break her heart as speedily as possible!" said Mr. Haredale, drawing on his glove.

"There Ned will act exactly as he pleases," returned the other, sipping his wine; "that's entirely his affair. I wouldn't for the world interfere with my son, Haredale, beyond a certain point. The relationship between father and son, you know, is positively quite a holy kind of bond.—Won't you let me persuade you to take one glass of wine! Well! as you please, as you please," he added, helping himself again.

"Chester," said Mr. Haredale, after a short silence, during which he had eyed his smiling face from time to time intently, "you have the head and heart of an evil spirit in all matters of deception."

"Your health!" said the other, with a nod. "But I have interrupted you—"

"If now," pursued Mr. Haredale, "we should find it difficult to separate these young people, and break off their intercourse—if, for instance, you find it difficult on your side, what course do you intend to take?"

"Nothing plainer, my good fellow, nothing easier," returned the other, shrugging his shoulders and stretching himself more comfortably before the fire. "I shall then exert those powers on which you flatter me so highly—though, upon my word, I don't deserve your compliments to their full extent—and resort to a few little trivial subterfuges for rousing jealousy and resentment. You see?"

"In short, justifying the means by the end, we are, as a last resource for tearing them asunder, to resort to treachery and—and lying," said Mr. Haredale.

"Oh dear no. Fie, fie!" returned the other, relishing a pinch of snuff extremely. "Not lying. Only a little management, a little diplomacy, a little—intriguing, that's the word."

"I wish," said Mr. Haredale, moving to and fro, and stopping, and moving on again, like one who was ill at ease, "that this could have been foreseen or prevented. But as it has gone so far, and it is necessary for us to act, it is of no use shrinking or regretting. Well! I shall second your endeavours to the utmost of my power. There is one topic in the whole wide range of human thoughts on which we both agree. We shall act in concert, but apart. There will be no need, I hope, for us to meet again."

"Are you going?" said Mr. Chester, rising with a graceful indolence. "Let me light you down the stairs."

"Pray keep your seat," returned the other dryly, "I know the way." So, waving his hand slightly, and putting on his hat as he turned upon his heel, he went clanking out as he had come, shut the door behind him, and tramped down the echoing stairs.

"Pah! A very coarse animal, indeed!" said Mr. Chester, composing himself in the easy chair again. "A rough brute. Quite a human badger!"

John Willet and his friends, who had been listening intently for the clash of swords, or firing of pistols in the great room, and had indeed settled the order in which they should rush in when summoned—in which procession old John had carefully arranged that he should bring up the rear—were very much astonished to see Mr. Haredale come down without a scratch, call for his horse, and ride away thoughtfully at a footpace. After some consideration, it was decided that he had left the gentleman above, for dead, and had adopted this stratagem to divert suspicion or pursuit.

As this conclusion involved the necessity of their going up stairs forthwith, they were about to ascend in the order they had agreed upon, when a smart ringing at the guest's bell, as if he had pulled it vigorously, overthrew all their speculations, and involved them in great uncertainty and doubt. At length Mr. Willet agreed to go up stairs himself, escorted by Hugh and Barnaby, as the strongest and stoutest fellows on the premises, who were to make their appearance under pretence of clearing away the glasses.

Under this protection, the brave and broad-faced John boldly entered the room, half a foot in advance, and received an order for a boot-jack without trembling. But when it was brought, and he leant his sturdy shoulder to the guest, Mr. Willet was observed to look very hard into his boots as he pulled them off, and, by opening his eyes much wider than usual, to appear to express some surprise and disappointment at not finding them full of blood. He took occasion too, to examine the gentleman as closely as he could, expecting to discover sundry loop-holes in his person, pierced by his adversary's sword. Finding none, however, and observing in course of time that his guest was as cool and unruffled, both in his dress and temper, as he had been all day, old John at last heaved a deep sigh, and began to think no duel had been fought that night.

"And now, Willet," said Mr. Chester, "if the room's well aired, I'll try the merits of that famous bed."

"The room, sir," returned John, taking up a candle, and nudging Barnaby and Hugh to accompany them, in case the gentleman should unexpectedly drop down faint or dead, from some internal wound, "the room's as warm as any toast in a tankard. Barnaby, take you that other candle, and go on before. Hugh! Follow up, sir, with the easy-chair."
In this order—and still, in his earnest inspection, holding his candle very close to the guest; now making him feel extremely warm about the legs, now threatening to set his wig on fire, and constantly begging his pardon with great awkwardness and embarrassment—John led the party to the best bed-room, which was nearly as large as the chamber from which they had come, and held, drawn out near the fire for warmth, a great old spectral bedstead, hung with faded brocade, and ornamented, at the top of each carved post, with a plume of feathers that had once been white, but with dust and age had now grown hearse-like and funereal.

“Good night, my friends,” said Mr. Chester with a sweet smile, seating himself, when he had surveyed the room from end to end, in the easy-chair which his attendants wheeled before the fire. “Good night! Barnaby, my good fellow, you say some prayers before you go to bed, I hope?”

Barnaby nodded. “He has some nonsense that he calls his prayers, sir,” returned old John, officiously. “I’m afraid there a’nt much good in ‘em.”

“And Hugh?” said Mr. Chester, turning to him.

“Not I,” he answered. “I know his”—pointing to Barnaby—“they’re well enough. He sings ‘em sometimes in the straw. I listen.”

“He’s quite a animal, sir,” John whispered in his ear with dignity. “You’ll excuse him, I’m sure. If he has any soul at all, sir, it must be such a very small one, that it don’t signify what he does or doesn’t in that way. Good night, sir!”

The guest rejoined “God bless you!” with a fervour that was quite affecting; and John, beckoning his guards to go before, bowed himself out of the room, and left him to his rest in the Maypole’s ancient bed.

END OF VOL. II.
ART-UNION OF LONDON.

This Society was established in 1830, for the purpose of affording to persons of moderate income the opportunity of gratifying a love of Art, by means of a annual Subscription The funds are divided into several various amounts, for the purchase of Pictures, Drawings, &c. from the London Exhibitions; 20s being annually set aside for the purpose of Encouraging an approved Picture. Every Subscriber of One Guinea has one share, by lot, for the purpose of a purchase, and one impression of the Engraving.

Mr. C. Landseer's Picture, "The Third Husband," is now engraving, in Line, by Mr. H. H. Benton, for the subscribers of the last year.

The subscription lists for 1841 will close on Wednesday, next, the 1st instant.

Prospects may be obtained at the Society's Office, No. 72, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury-square, where the lists are daily, from 12 till 5 o'clock, to receive subscriptions, and afford any information that may be required.

C. P. DIBDIN, Esq., Treasurer.

(Out by Order)

T. E. JONES, Clerk to the Committee.

V. G. R.

J. G. GILLOT's very super-

THE PATENT and other BALILLI PENs

may be had of all Stationers, Book-sellers, and other dealers in Pens throughout the United Kingdom. — The best test of the celebrity which these Pens have attained with the Public is the great and regularly increasing demand for them. — The number of Pens manufactured at the works of J. G. GILLOT, from Oct. 1837 to Oct. 1838; and from Oct. 1838 to Oct. 1839, were 9,809,007, and 2,954,876 respectively; or, 12,763,883. is, 17,781,808 dollars.

Please observe—all the genuine Pens are marked in full, Joseph GILLOT, Wholesale and for Exportation at the manufacturers, Victoria Works, Graham-street, &c., Newhall-street, Birmingham.

"An idle conduct of a clowned Cane."—Pope.

D. DRESS AND RIDING CANES.

The newest and most elegant designs for the present season, are at W. R. BARNET's, Manufacturress to H. H. Prince Albert, 14th, Regent-street, and 34, Fleet-street.

Wheeler's for exportation.

HARVEY'S FISH SAUCE.

LAZENBY and SON, sole Proprietors of the Receipt for this much-admired SAUCE, respectfully beg leave to acquaint their customers, that the bottle of the genuine article bears the name of WILLIAM LAZENBY on the back, in addition to the front label used so many years, and signed. ELIZABETH LAZENBY. Warehouse, 6, Edward-street, Portman-square.

C. CELEBRATED FOR BOYS' CLOTHING.

DOUDNEY AND SON,

49, LOMBARD STREET.—ESTABLISHED 1784.

Haberdashery, best cloth, &c.—Camlet Cloths, 6d. 6d. Cloth ditto, 11d.

A GENTLEMANLY SUIT OF THE BEST QUALITY. 49 6d.

Superfine Dress Coat. 42 10 s.

Ditto Frock coat, silk facings. 3 10 s.

Ditto various, new style. 3 10 s.

Morning Dress Coats. 1 5 s.

Cloth or Jackskin Trowsers. 1 5 s.

Ladies' Riding Habits. 4 4 s.

THE MODERN STREET CLOTHES. 49 LOMBARD STREET.
ADVERTISEMENTS.

Now ready, beautifully printed on Drawing-paper, Part II., of

THE HANDS TO HUMPHREY'S CLOCK;

BEG TO

A SERIES OF ILLUSTRATIONS AND PORTRAITS OF ALL THE PRINCIPAL SCENES & CHARACTERS IN "HUMPHREY'S CLOCK."

BY JACOB PARALLEL.

PARTS I. AND II. CONTAIN THE

1. {Quoth teaching Sophie Wacklin.
   "Flight from the Racecourse.
   "Drawn in Dots."

AND PORTRAITS OF THE

Master Humphry, No. 1.
Mr. Quill, No. 2.
Dick Squiggles, No. 3.
Mr. Brus, No. 4.
Mr. Mens, No. 5.

"Bold, spirited sketches, full of right merrie touches. Every one who has the hands in his hands should have the Hands."-Ld. Gravel.

"Jacob Parallel! has produced a series of very spirited and agreeable illustrations to the 'Clock.' They cannot fail to be highly acceptable to the readers and admirers of Boy's work."-Town.

"The talent ' Jacob Parallel' has displayed in these sketches, and the brilliant delineation of character, will ensure a large sale for the 'Hands to Humphrey's Clock.'"-Bravo.

"These is series of humorously conceived and faithfully executed illustrations to the 'Clock,' by 'Jacob Parallel.' They are alike worthy of the work they so well illustrate, and creditable to the talent and production of the Author."-Giver.

These 'Hands' are, upon the face of them, a very striking and useful Phrases and Genius, to lose up without them. They consist of illustrations by 'Jacob Parallel,' fully realizing the description.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES, MILLINERS, & DRESS-MAKERS.

On the 1st of every Month, price 1s.

THE LADIES GAZETTE OF FASHION;

Containing nearly 100 pages, and superbly colored, Figures of French and English Costume; consisting of Morning, Evening, and Casual Dress, figures of Paris, Suits, Hats, Caps, Tunics, Gowns, Petticoats, etc., With a liberal supply of Excursions, Observations on the Changes in the Fashions; Original Types, Poetry, &c., by distinguished Authors.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED PERIODICAL.

In Numbers at 1s., Parts at 6d. each.

THE LITERARY WORLD;

A Journal of Popular Information and Entertainment, conducted by Jacob Times, Eleven years Editor of "The Mirror."--"A pleasing and instructive periodical, cheap in price, and evidently got up."-Observer.

"An amusing and instructive, as well as literarily illustrated, periodical."-Allix.

"The engravings are executed in clever style. The work is handsome and substantial, and altogether got up in such taste as to secure the encouragement of the reading public."-Brighton Herald.

"The companion and delight of our new generation of contemporaries; the monument to Sir Walter Scott, at Edinburgh, is a very engaging engraving, and the literary contents are various, splendid, and intelligent."-Literary Gazette.

"We think the new engravings of superior execution,"-Spectator.

"It is like a pleasant and well-informed companion, whose society enables one to keep pace with the 'improvements' of the day, in a manner that is generally superior to those in any cheap periodicals we have seen. We can conscientiously recommend its purchase."-Observer.

"The Literary World seems to be conducted with judgment; it is got up in a very tasteful manner."-Observer.

To cloth lettered, price 2s.

A PRACTICAL INTRODUCTION TO THE FRENCH LANGUAGE;

Containing a concise Grammar and the most useful Phrases and Idioms of the French Language, with copious Extracts for Practical Translation. By Reverend Purway, L.L.D., F.R.S., Author of "The Practical Greek and Latin Grammars," "Elements of Latin Composition," "Practical French Grammar," and "Greek Grammar."--"In the above work the Author has paid considerable attention to the pronunciation, and in a line of lives above the French words, has given the pronouncing in which each word should be sounded.

In 1 vol., price 1ls., with Twenty Illustrations by "Jacob Parallel," or in 10 Parts, at 6d. each.

CHARLEY CHALK; OR, THE CAREER OF AN ARTIST.

Compiling a Narrative of his Adventures through Great Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, Hungary, Servia, Bulgaria, Greece, and the East, containing descriptions of the Eccentric Characters and Ludicrous Events which he experienced during his Travels.

"Another Pickwick."-Literary Gazette.

"There is no more amusing and good-humour'd book in it, and the illustrations are most effectually in its amusement of laughter. Character is hit off with spirit and an attractive fancy."-Tatler.

"One of the most amusing periodicals we ever had the good fortune to peruse. Its full of ridicule and fun, and the plates are superb."-Observer.

"Full of ludicrous scenes."-Spectator.

"Very vigorous and graphically written. The illustrations are full of humour."-Morning Post.

"A capital story, ingeniously illustrated."-True Sun.

The above work may be read at every Circulating Library in the Kingdom.

LONDON: G. BERGER, HOLYWELL STREET, STRAND; and all Booksellers in the United Kingdom.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED, WHITEFRIARS.